About the Author

Edmund Clerihew Bentley

Edmund Clerihew Bentley was a British writer and journalist, best known for inventing the clerihew, a humorous four-line biographical poem. Educated at St. Paul's School and Oxford, he crafted playful poems about famous people with clever wordplay. Bentley also wrote detective fiction, notably 'Trent's Last Case' (1913), acclaimed for its innovative plot and psychological depth. His work influenced later mystery writers, establishing him as both a literary humorist and a crime fiction pioneer.

Product Description

The Woman in Black by E. C. Bentley is a short, playful clerihew about a mysterious, ghostly woman. Written in Bentley’s signature humorous style, the poem presents the Woman in Black as a spectral figure who walks through the night and frightens children. Though brief, it captures a whimsical, slightly eerie mood, blending lighthearted humor with gothic imagery, showcasing Bentley’s invention of the clerihew form and his talent for witty, imaginative verse.
